For Academic Projects and Contributions, some flexibility will be maintained in the headings, with only the INTRODUCTION, OBJECTIVES, CONCLUSIONS, REFERENCES and CURRICULUM being mandatory, and all others being subject to the author's discretion.

For Research Studies or Bibliographical Reviews, 7 headings numbered in Arabic numerals should be included. If you wish to add any more, it is best to do so as subheadings. The number of subheadings is not limited.

NUMBERING WITHIN TEXT

The numbering within text (not the numbering of the headings) is also in Arabic numerals. They are not preceded by a blank space with respect to the preceding paragraph, but are followed by a blank space with respect to the following paragraph:

1. First item of information.
2. Second item of information.
3. ...

CITATIONS:

Indirect or referential citation in normal text.

When paraphrasing or alluding to ideas from another work, the author and the year of the work should be placed in parentheses. It is recommended to indicate the page if the text from which the quotation is taken is long (Author, Year, pp. xxx). If the paragraph includes the surname(s) of the author, only the date of the reference should be written in parentheses (Year). If the author is not cited in the paragraph, then the surname(s) and the date (Author, Year) should be written in parentheses. When the reference contains one or two authors, the surname(s) of both authors and the year (Author and Author, Year) should be written. If the reference contains more than two authors, only the surname(s) of the first author should be used, followed by et al. (Author et al., Year).

Direct or textual citation within normal text (less than 40 words)).

The text of the citation should be opened and closed with quotation marks. If the cited text reference has one or two authors, the surname(s) of both, the year and the page number(s) should be cited (Author and Author, Year, p. xxx). When the reference has more than two authors, only the surname(s) of the first author should be written, followed by et al., the year and the page (Author et al., Year, p. xxx).

Direct or textual citation in normal text (more than 40 words).

If the citation is longer than 40 words, it should be written in a separate paragraph, without quotation marks and indented. At the end of the citation, the data of the reference should be included following these instructions: if the cited text has one or two authors, the surname(s) of both, the year and the page number(s) should be cited (Author and Author, Year, pp. xxx). When there are more than two authors, only the surname(s) of the first author should be written, followed by et al., the year and page number(s) (Author et al., Year, p. xxx).

REFERENCES

Bibliographic references should be included following the bibliographic style of the American Psychological Association (latest edition). All references, regardless of their type (book, article, thesis, etc.) must be included in alphabetical order by surname, without exception. Times New Roman 12, hanging indent 0.5 cm and justified. There should be a blank space between bibliographical references and the interlining should be simple. If the same author has more than one reference, his/her surname(s) should be rewritten, avoiding hyphens.
